WHITE PLAINS.

Marie C. Smith recently applied to Justice Dykman, in the Supreme Court, for a writ of per-emptory mandamus requiring the County Treas-ured, Francis M. Carpenter, to accept payment of certain taxes, with interest due, on certain prop-erty in the Twenty-fourth Ward of New-York City, In denying the motion Justice Dykman says: "The premises have been twice sold for taxes-first, for the tax of 1863, to Thomas Shea, and, second, for the year 1868, to James Parrish; but no lease has been executed by the County Treasurer on either of the sales. The relator is now the holder of the certificate issued to James Parrish, and she can certificate issued to James Parrish, and she can therefore surrender that and have the tax cancelled which it represents. The difficulty arises over the sale to Sitea. That certificate is outstanding. The question is controlled by Section 6 of Chapter 34 of the Laws of 1839. Although that act has been amended several times, yet Section 5 remains as it was originally enacted. By that section the purchaser of premises sold for taxes pursuant to the nat is entitled to a lease of such premises at the expiration of one year from the time of the sale, provided no redemption thereof has been made. While it is true that no lease has been executed in pursuance of the sale to Shea for the taxes of 1832, yet the certificate is outstanding, and the holder is entitled to a lease upon the presentation thereof to the Treasurer of the county, who, therefore has no authority to cancel the sale, for the certificate may be presented at any time. It thus appears that the relator cannot obtain the railef she requests." At a special term of the Supreme Court yesterday morning Justice J. O. Dykman granted a decree of divorce to Mrs. Carrie Rosenthal from her husband, Morris Rosenthal. Both live in New-York City, and were married on July 14, 1830.

The late Mr. Hagan was a man of strong convictions and much reticence. He was a man of deeds, not of words. This characteristic is well illustrated by a story that is still told by tevering braves. Closing hour having arrived one evening. Mr. Hagan was about to pull down the shatters of his place of business when a young man entered, carrying much mixed ale in his midst. "I'm craxy," announced the visitor, and forthwith proceeded to do much damage among the glassware of the bar. He demolished about half of it with one blow of his stick, and just here Mr. Hagan's character showed itself. "I'm crazy, too, 'he remarked, and, annexing a convenient bungstarter, he smote the intruder to the earth. Only one scene remained in the drama, and in that an ambulance held the centre of the stage in the full glare of the lime-light. It is such strength of character and promptness in action that Mr. Hagan's friends and admirers propose to commemorate fittingly by changing the name of Rutherfurd Place.

CHADWICK DEFEATS ARMSTRONG IN A

The competitive golfing season at the Staten Island Cricket Club was opened yesterday with a thirty-six hole match between George E. Armstrong and J. R. Chadwick. Both have had a strong backing among the club's members this winter, and the contest was the result of a goodpretty much all day, eighteen holes being decided in the forenoon and the rest in the afternoon. Chadwick won by a score of two up and one to go. I. Cryder Lee was Armstrong's chief backer, while Ogden Fowler supported Chadwick. A large number of small bets hung on the outcome.

victory. Both did the morning round in eighty-six. By holes, Armstrong finished one up. In making his opening drive Armstrong foozled, and got into the road, which gave Chadwick the first hole by Chadwick also got the second, but long put, that gave the latter the hole in the bogle figure of three. In playing the fourth, Chadwick drove into a cemetery, and though he made a good attempt with his iron, Armstrong got it by 4 to The match proceeded in this even fashion for most of the morning. These scores tell the story:

Appreximated.

In the second round Chadwick established a new record of the nine holes. The old record was 38. Chadwick did them in 35. Chadwick's work all through this part of the match was capital. On tre thirty-first hole Armstrong's ball hit a tree on the fair green and rebounded into a brook, forcing him to lift with a penalty of one stroke. This started Chadwick's lead. At the thirty-third hole the latter was dormle three. The next went to Armstrong at 4 to 5, which left Chadwick dormle two, and the thirty-fifth was halved, giving Chadwick the match.

On this last hole Armstrong's ball hung on the very lip of the cup, but did not drop in. Had it not done so, he would have had a chance to halve the match. The bye hole was also played, Chadwick taking it at 4 to 5. The scores of this part of the contest were:

yards. The old fourth and fifth holes have been cut out and the ninth shortened. The turf was in capital condition for so early in the season, and, with the exception of one or two soft spots, offered excellent lies for the balls. W. W. Lowrey acted as referee.
